President Sees College Athletics As Asset

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

I wish I could be with you to share the excitement of today's game. I love the color and action of college football, and the spirit of the players and the crowd unfailingly stirs my pride in the energy and resourcefulness of the American people.

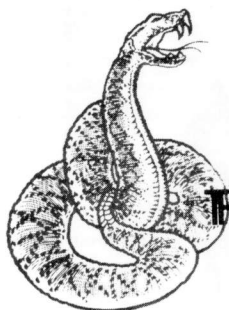

Healthy competition has always inspired our best efforts, and it is in the search for perfection that we expand our potential and our horizons.

As we approach our Nation's 200th birthday, I count our colleges and universities, and the athletic programs which they support, among our most valuable national assets and proudest achievements. They exemplify a fullness of the vigor and variety envisioned for our society by our founding fathers.

America's continuing enjoyment of healthy competitive sports is a positive influence in our action-oriented way of life. We see in athletics the opportunity for the challenge and adventure which have always been part of the American experience. I hope we will always continue to enrich this experience for the benefit of all our people.

Greetings from the President of Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University

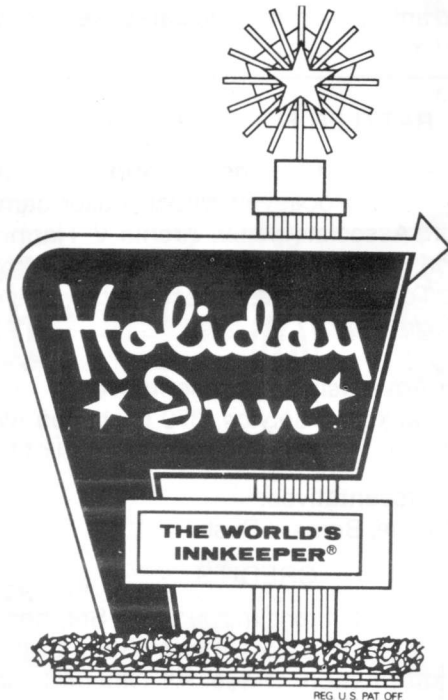

The opening game of every football season always fills the air with a kind of excitement akin to none other, and I am happy to welcome you to share this excitement with us.

We are looking forward to tonight's contest with the Golden Rams of Albany State College. It is the renewal of a young rivalry that is fast becoming one of the hottest in this section of the country. We welcome the friendly competition from our sister institution.

On behalf of the entire FAMU family I welcome the representatives of Albany State and their followers. I also welcome the many friends and supporters of FAMU. Coaches and players from both teams have worked hard to prepare for this game and it is our sincere wish that you enjoy the evening's activities.

Nursing Program Under Way

Florida A&M University is entering its first year as the coordinating institution for a model baccalaureate degree program designed for licensed registered nurses at the University of North Florida (UNF) at Jacksonville and the University of West Florida (UWF) at Pensacola.

As coordinating institution, FAMU is playing a central role in implementing and directing the Inter-Institutional Program in Baccalaureate Education for Registered Nurses in Florida. The program began with the fall quarter.

The program involves five of the nine universities in Florida's State University System (SUS). It was designed to help gain a more viable role for FAMU in the SUS, and to help attract a more diverse student population to the FAMU campus in satisfaction of a partial requirement of Florida's plan for equalizing educational opportunities in public higher education.

Dr. Marian Samuels Grier, chief coordinator, said the new two-year baccalaureate degree program for registered nurses is being conducted at UNF jointly by FAMU, the University of Florida and UNF. At UWF, the program is being conducted by FAMU, Florida State University and UWF, she said.

Degrees awarded in Pensacola will come jointly from FAMU and FSU. Students who complete the program in Jacksonville will be awarded degrees jointly from FAMU and UF.

"This program provides a unique and innovative approach to baccalaureate education, as well as a wholistic approach to the health care field," said Dr. Grier, who took over her post August 1.

At both UNF and UWF the course will consist of 90 quarter-hours of upper level degree work. Professional nursing courses make up half of the requirement while the remaining 45 quarter-hours are composed of general education courses.

Dr. Grier explained that graduation from a three-year program, an associate degree or equivalent, and current licensing to practice as a registered nurse are prerequisites of the program. All nurses admitted will be viewed as "practicing, motivated adults," she said.

"Since most of the students who are currently enrolled are already working nurses, trying to challenge them while encouraging their involvement in their education, and further motivating them will be among our goals," Dr. Grier stated. She added that the program will use seminars and individualized programming more than lectures "in order to encourage more learner participation and build on the students' previous experiences."

At UNF, 70 students have been admitted. The number at UWF is 15.

"Through this program," Dr. Grier said, "we hope to introduce our nurses to professional socialization—that is to say, we will help them operationalize a feeling of their profession and all the responsibilities that go with it, including self-awareness and viewing man as a physio-socio-cultural-spiritual being that is part of a dynamic environment."

Dr. Grier explained that today's nurse is often called upon to perform without a physician's orders. She added that there is a need for nurses to perform physical and psychological assessments, to conduct research and to publish the results of their research.

All this and more, she said, is part of the program's goal of "preparing the nurse for being a professional and expanding the knowledge of the nurse so that he or she may employ a more empirical approach to rendering care and effecting change for better health care."

The Inter-Institutional Program in Baccalaureate Education for Nurses in Florida has been placed under the aegis of continuing education, and is thus considered an external degree program. Classes at UNF and UWF will be taught during the day or evening, according to the convenience of the students.

As associate professor and chief coordinator of the program, Dr. Grier is responsible for designing courses and course sequences, finding resources, and the overall implementation. She is a native of Atlanta and graduated from high school in Ft. Pierce. She holds the B.S. degree in Nursing from FAMU, the M.Ed. degree from the University of Oklahoma, and the Ph.D. degree in Educational Psychology from the University of Oklahoma.

Frankie & Claude: Six Million Dollar Men

by JOHN VAN GIESON

Florida A&M linebackers Frankie Poole and Claude Johnson are the best in the Southeast, says Rattler football coach Rudy Hubbard.

"I've been around some good ones, but as far as raw talent goes, Frankie Poole and Claude Johnson are the best I've seen," Hubbard said. In terms of speed or strength, I don't think there're two better in the Southeast than Claude and Frankie."

Hoping to improve on the 6-5 record of his maiden season, Hubbard faces many problems, but not at linebacker.

Roosevelt Wilson, FAMU sports publicist, is so excited about the pair of seniors that he's dubbed them the "$6-Million Men."

Johnson, 6-foot-2 and 238 pounds, is an Orlando senior who had 74 unassisted tackles, 50 assists, recovered three fumbles and had one interception last year—all despite missing part of the season with a leg injury.

Poole, a 6-4, 210-pound senior from Melbourne, had 82 solo tackles, 76 assists, caused three fumbles, recovered four, intercepted one pass and blocked two kicks. He was credited with three quarterback sacks.

Narrow at the waist, Poole's body flares into a massive torso and powerful shoulders.

"Frankie's one of the strongest guys I've ever seen," Hubbard said. "When he came here he was very, very skinny, but he started lifting weights. He took it as a challenge."

An assistant coach at Ohio State before he accepted the FAMU job last year, Hubbard said Poole may be as good at linebacker as Randy Gradishir, former Buckeye All-American who now plays for the Denver Broncos.

The Rattler coach said Johnson rates with Jack Tatum, former Ohio State defensive back who starts for the Oakland Raiders, in a meanness measure that professional scouts call "leather pop."

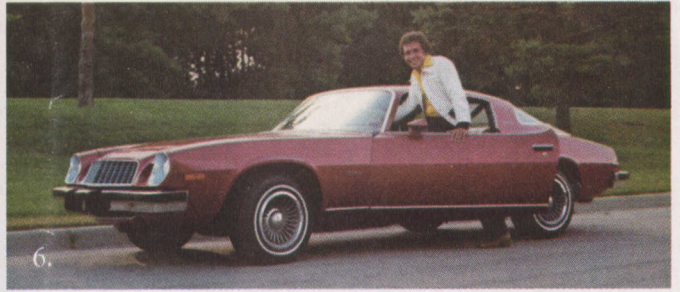

"He's got great quickness for a linebacker, and he's got the ability to really unload at the same time," Hubbard said. "He seems to be able to coil and uncoil, and run through the ball carrier at the same time without losing any speed."

MONTEZUMA'S OFFICIAL GUIDE TO THE ANCIENT TEQUILA ARTS.

The Aztec Empire. It's long gone. However, modern man is rediscovering its secrets.

A key to the rediscovery is the Sun Stone, a sort of time-capsule that outlines the history of the Aztecs and, according to Montezuma® Tequila, what the Aztecs liked to drink and when they liked to drink it.

Within the inner ring of the Sun Stone are twenty symbols; one for each day of the Aztec week. Each symbol also suggests what kind of drink might be appropriate to serve on that day.

XOCHITL

Montezuma Margarita

The flower symbolizes the last day of the Aztec week, representing the ultimate in true beauty and pleasure. The drink: 2 oz. Montezuma Tequila; ½ oz. Triple Sec; juice ½ lime; pinch of salt; stir in shaker over ice; rub rim of cocktail glass with lime peel and spin in salt; strain shaker into cocktail glass.

Tequila-Pineapple Liqueur. The 3rd day of the Aztec week is symbolized by a house, representing hospitality and at-home entertaining. The drink: fill a jar half way with chunks of ripe pineapple; pour Montezuma Tequila to the brim; add 1 teaspoon sugar (optional); cap jar and place in refrigerator for 24 hours; drain off liquid and serve as an after-dinner liqueur.

Horny Bull™ Cocktail. A horned animal symbolizes the 7th day of the Aztec week, representing high-spirited and casual fun. The drink: 1 oz. Montezuma Tequila over ice in unusual glassware, mason jar, jelly jar, beer mug etc.; fill with fresh orange juice or orange breakfast drink.

Tequila Fizz. The rain symbolizes the 19th day of the Aztec week, representing cool refreshment. The drink: 2 oz. Montezuma Tequila; juice ½ lime; ½ teaspoon sugar; two dashes orange biters; stir in a tall glass over ice; fill with club soda; garnish with lime shell.

Tequila Straight. Water symbolizes the 9th day of the Aztec week, representing simple and uncomplicated pleasure. The drink: Pour 1½ oz. of Montezuma Gold Tequila in shot glass. Put salt on back of thumb; hold a wedge of lime between thumb and 1st finger; lick salt, drink Tequila, bite into lime in one flowing motion.

Montezuma Tequila. In White. In Gold. Made in the tradition of the finest ancient tequilas. For additional Tequila Arts recipes, write: Montezuma Tequila Arts, Barton Brands, 200 South Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois 60604. And may Tonatiuh* smile upon you.

HAMPTON SMITH RAM HEAD COACH

Hampton Smith is entering his fifth season as the head coach of the Rams. His 1974 squad posted a sub-par 3-7 mark, but with experienced veterans at several of the key positions, better things are in store for the 1975 season.

Smith, a graduate of Mississippi Valley State, where he earned his B.S. degree and earned all "Big 8" honors for three straight years, a first ever at Mississippi.

The confident, vibrant Mississippi Deltian received his M.A. degree from Tennessee State, where he was a graduate student and an assistant coach working primarily with Merritt's "Big Blue" defensive unit.

No newcomer to the coaching ranks, Smith coached for one year on the Mississippi Valley staff and for ten years at two Mississippi high schools - Higgins in McComb and J. E. Johnson in Prentice.

Smith, an aggressive gridiron headmaster, believes in working his men hard and that is probably one of his keys to success.

His innate confidence that he is a winner, is probably his major key to success and that spirit seems to rub off on his players who see themselves as winners, also.

His outlook on the opposition is very basic, "All of our opponents are tough, but I don't see anyone that we can not beat. We have the material to be winners, its just a matter of everyone doing his job at all times."

Smith is married to the former Charlene Johnson of McComb, Mississippi.

CHARLES L. HAYES FIFTH PRESIDENT

In recent years, Albany State College has experienced the most rapid and progressive growth in its 73-year history. A big reason for the tremendous growth is a man named Charles L. Hayes.

Dr. Hayes is the fifth president to serve at ASC since its doors opened in 1903. Other presidents throughout the history of the college have been Joseph W. Holley, 1903-1943; Aaron Brown, 1943-1953; William H. Dennis, 1953-1965 and Thomas M. Jenkins, 1965-1969.

Dr. Hayes was inaugurated as President of the College in October of 1969, after serving in an important position with the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare as chief of the Developing Institutions Branch, Division of College Support, U. S. Office of Education.

The Louisiana native holds a master's degree in Education from Loyola University of Chicago and a doctorate in Education from Colorado State University, Greeley.

An avid sportsman, who has become one of the top supporters of athletics at the college, Dr. Hayes is an active member of numerous national, professional and civic organizations and learned societies.

Dr. Hayes has an approach to athletics that is basic and understandable. "I look at our athletic department in the same manner as I might look at our English or Science Department," he says. "I expect a certain amount of excellence. Athletics on the college level represents the institution like any other phase of our program and should be administered properly and above reproach for this reason. Our coaches are highly capable men. Our teams should perform accordingly."

He and his wife, the former Bette M. Harris of Maywood, Illinois, have two sons - Charles Jerome, 21 and Jamie, 19.

Albany State Today!

Albany State is looking good.

When we opened in 1903 as the Albany Bible and Manual Training Institute we looked like most other struggling young Black schools . . . not enough room, not enough teachers.

But then we started progressing. From that small training institute, Albany State College evolved as one of the leading state institutions of higher learning in Southwest Georgia.

When you take a look at Albany State College today, you will be amazed. We've got a new mall which is the focal point of the campus and a "cul-de-sac." Then all around you, you'll see some new, modern buildings.

Another part of our 125 acre campus you'll really like, especially if you've lived in a big city, is open spaces shaded by all kinds of big trees. This area is a great place to just relax and talk. It's more like a park than a college campus.

We offer the Bachelor's degrees through three Divisions: Arts and Sciences, Business and Education.

The Master of Education degree was authorized in principle, by the Board of Regents in December 1971 with the effective date of the program to be established by future action of the Regents. Graduate work in the field of education and business are currently offered on our campus by Georgia State University and Valdosta State College respectively.

We think we've got a lot to offer. Why not check us out!

PROSPECTS FOR 1975

The Rams lost 16 lettermen from the 1974 offensive and defensive teams and opponents should expect to see many new faces on the two 1975 units.

The defensive secondary, that has allowed opponents less than 100 yards passing per game for the last two seasons, should be even better this year with the return of all-conference performers, Roy Lott, 6-1, 175; James Gail, 5-11, 190 and Otis Thomas, 6-1, 177.

Offensively, five of seven starters are returning and this should give the Rams much needed experience along the front line; however, the offensive line will be short on depth. Head coach Hampton Smith will be relying on the incoming freshmen to fill the void and supply some much needed depth. Among the top returners are guards, Marcus Whaley, 5-11, 240 and Michael Robertson, 6-2, 240 and all-conference split-end, George Roundtree, 6-2, 210, last year's leading scorer with 73 points.

However, the entire Ram offensive backfield has graduated with the exception of James Stancil, 6-1, 230. The loss of all-conference running back, Lester Sherman, is expected to be felt, but with a host of young and talented runners on hand, the Rams could be the surprise team in the conference.

Gone from the '74 edition of the Rams defensive unit will be all-conference defensive end, Harold Little and defensive tackle, Dennis Gaines. Coach Smith has done some rearrangement of personnel and hopes that these adjustments will give him the type of defense he has been looking for.

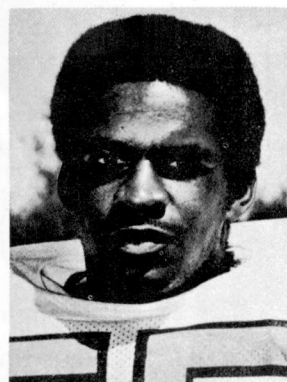

According to Smith, "We are going to expect a lot of help from the freshmen and I am certainly not afraid to play a freshman, if he is doing the job. The people who will be playing this fall will be those who are doing their job all of the time."

Architecture School Opens

by HORACE GOSIER

Florida A&M University's new School of Architecture was officially opened on September 11 under the guidance of a man with an eye to the future.

He is Richard Kenneth Chalmers, a Buffalo, N.Y., architect, urban planner, designer and educator who was appointed dean of the new school May 5.

Chalmers brings to his new post a background of education and professional experience which FAMU President Dr. B. L. Perry believes will help give the school excellence, recognition and respectability.

He also brings a philosophy, one which recognizes the demands and challenges of today's architect, and one which takes into view the ever-changing complexities of architecture and the unlimited possibilities it holds for tomorrow.

Youthful in appearance and vigorous in demeanor, the 41 year-old Chalmers speaks confidently and emphatically his views on his profession and his goals for the new school of architecture.

"The word 'architecture' is derived from the Greek words meaning chief workman, and historically the architect was a 'master builder' who knew an enormous amount about everything.

"That was a perfectly adequate definition when the world was less complicated and moved a lot slower. But with the rapid rate of change in today's world, no one can be that master, that chief."

Chalmers explained that the architect, like the physician, is faced with increasing specialization on top of general practice.

"If you look at the existing schools of architecture," he said, "you'll find they are generally training architects as general practitioners, and this is good.

"But what we intend to do at FAMU is accomplish some additional things that must be done so that the architect can keep up with the change in complexity in his field."

Chalmers explained that the architect is called upon to fill a multiplicity of roles. In addition to being a practicing professional, the architect conceivably is an educator, a manager, an architectural planner, a researcher, construction technologist, building economist, and must be astute in the areas of public relations and marketing, he said.

"Today, very little training or experience in these areas takes place in schools of architecture," said Chalmers.

"Our goal at FAMU is to put the student in a position which allows him or her to take an option and place some emphasis in a concentrated area."

The FAMU School of Architecture is being operated as a cooperative program between FAMU and the University of Florida's College of Architecture for three years until the new school becomes accredited.

The new dean lauded the program at UF, and pointed out that FAMU's program will not duplicate the tracts at UF, but will complement them.

The cooperative arrangement between UF and FAMU is necessary because an architect must be graduated from an accredited school in order to become a registered architect, and a school of architecture cannot be accredited until it has graduated a registered architect.

The Florida Board of Regents called for the establishment of a new school of architecture in the spring of 1974 after a statewide survey suggested the need for such a school at one of the state's nine universities.

The BOR determined that placing the school at FAMU would help make FAMU more attractive to a diverse student body, and in so doing, satisfy the mandate of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) plan for equalizing public higher education in Florida.

The new school opened its doors with 65 to 75 students enrolled in freshman and junior classes.

TWO WINNERS ON CAMPUS

For those willing to accept it the Naval ROTC at FAMU offers a challenge:

- The demanding work of an officer in the modern Navy or Marine Corps.
- The opportunity to compete for a four-year full-tuition scholarship with an additional $100.00 a month stipend.
- The excitement of participating in an organization composed of men and women who know what they want in life and who are doing something about it.

Freshmen and sophomores are still eligible to become a part of the Naval ROTC at FAMU. Stop in and visit with us at:

690 Gamble Street (Across from Polkinghorne Village)

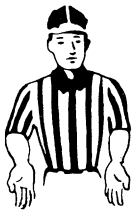

or call us at: 904/224-5477

If a challenge is what you seek in life, Naval ROTC could be for you.
